

People like us - how arrogance is dividing Islam and the West

Picador - People like us : how arrogance is dividing Islam and the West / Waleed Aly

Description: No two civilisations have spoken so many words about each other in recent years as those of Islam and the West. And no two seem to have communicated less. As a Muslim born and raised in Australia, Waleed Aly stands at the intersection of these two civilisations. From there he sees a world of radical misunderstandings, perpetuated by the inability of each to look beyond the stereotypes and truly comprehend the other. People Like Us examines the cultural chasm between Islam and the West by confronting the issues at the heart of the misunderstanding: women, jihad, secularism, terrorism, Reformation and modernity. Drawing on the authors knowledge of Western and Islamic intellectual traditions, it provides a fascinating analysis of these subjects, exposing the depth of ignorance surrounding them and the role of both Muslim and Western media in reinforcing stereotypes. Above all, it argues that the only way to avoid perpetual and escalating conflict between Islam and the West is to acknowledge one indisputable and powerful truth: that we are all complex, nuanced people. We must resist the mutual temptation to assume that the others problems could be solved if only they became more like us. This is a brave and provocative book of rare insight, and an indispensable contribution to understanding our troubled world.

Very informative for an ignorant person like myself and Aly's approach seems extremely considered and level-headed. And how this fact is validating paedophilia in Muslim countries with marriageable girl ages of 8-9 in Iran and Saudi Arabia. He's my contemporary and yet has written this incredibly important book - a book that, for all my issues with it see eg my status updates , I would still recommend highly, particularly to Australian or Aus-dwellers.

Aly, Waleed

In October, Aly and Whitty received two Walkley nominations for Excellence in Journalism.

Khamīs, Zabyah

In May 2016 Aly was Liberty Victoria's winner of the Award for free speech. A Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission report in 2004 highlighted the depth of the problem. And for no group of people has this been more true than for Muslims living in the West.

People Like Us: How Arrogance is Dividing Islam and the West, by Waleed Aly;

He has contributed regularly to The Australian, The Australian Financial Review, The Sydney Morning Herald and The Age, and he has been commended at both the Walkley awards and the Quill Awards for his commentary. This is an excellent book for getting around some of the one-sidedness of the information both. This is a great read for anyone trying to understand multiple perspectives on some of the issues in the world today- most specifically and obviously, the growing chasm between Islam and the West and the position of those occupying both worlds. It ends with an optimistic vision of an Islamic 'renaissance' that is strong enough to counter the terrorist narrative.

Waleed is currently 42 years old. I am not phobic of any religion but am extremely sceptical and don't think religion should ever be a 'free pass' for bad behaviour.

Fiercely anti-extremist, yet just as critical of western prejudice. This book is good as new — lucky you! He was born in 1970s, in the middle of Generation X, and in the Year of the Horse. He has been a regular guest co-host on The Conversation Hour with on and on Channel 10 and also was a regular panel member and producer on , a weekly program presented by young members of Melbourne's Muslim community and produced by first for and later for.
