I examine works by such artists as Saeki Shunkō, Uemura Shōen, Miyamoto Saburō, and Fujita Tsuguharu, focusing on issues of social regimentation, new classicism, eugenics, and the mechanized human body. Abstract This dissertation investigates how fascist ideology—the modern political ideology that promotes spiritual collectivism—was translated into the Japanese context and was mediated through the visual culture.

Envisioning fascist space, time, and body : Japanese

Tokyō : San'ichi Shobō MLA Citation Fukunaga, Misao. The dissertation scrutinizes the development of both Japanese-style paintings Nihon-ga and Western-style paintings yōga in the wartime period, exploring how they manifest fascist imaginations of social space, historical time, and the human body.
