I don't know much of the world, and I think that's what makes it so easy for me to accept fantasies - so much of the world sounds like a fantasy to me, reaching me through the artificial filters of Instagram photos, movies and just plain hearsay. And the Beatles' Pepperland from Yellow Submarine is described as a country 18,000 leagues beneath the Sea of Green, where inhabitants dress in bright colors and rainbows are frequent. Written with the wit and insight that has made Alberto Manguel a bestselling authority on literature, the book is also a visual treat: more than 200 original illustrations and maps reveal the lay of the land in Oz, Lilliputia, Narnia, and elsewhere.
