The wars they treat are frequently well known to the general populace. Description: Chava is a golem, a creature made of clay, brought to life to by a disgraced rabbi who dabbles in dark Kabbalistic magic and dies at sea on the voyage from Poland. He goes to movies and has a series of meaningless flings with his secretaries.

A new life for the novel

In reading these works as instances of a single literary tradition, the conspiracy narrative tradition, the author traces how the representation of conspiracy changes in nineteenth-century British literature and argues that many of these changes occur in response to significant Victorian-era developments, such as the European revolutions of 1848-49, the rise of British law enforcement agencies, the growth of Irish Fenian terrorism, and the fin-de-siècle waning of the British Empire. The writer looks into how the American history is full of warnings of hidden conspiracies perpetrated by various secret — and not so secret — organizations, including: Extra-Terrestrial Invaders, Secret Government, World Bankers, the Communists, the Roman Catholics, the Zionists, the Freemasons, the Illuminati, just to name a few.

War in Literature and Drama

The novel swirls through time, from present-day Minnesota to the Mohawk territory of the 1620s, to the ancient biblical world, brought to life by an indigenous woman who would come to be known as the Virgin Mary. A must read for all interested in seeing how the government manipulate the public via the media to get them to do what they want.
