Celebration in Grand Teton to mark 40th anniversary of JDR Parkway

Post World War II saw an increase visitation to national parks and the deteriorated and limited accommodations in Grand Teton National Park. Meanwhile, back in 1872, the Yellowstone National Park had been established further north and the superintendent, Horace Albright, tried to block any further dam construction plans because he felt it would impact the lakes and rivers within the park. Today visitors can simply look at the tower, walk the 1.
