Depression is first on the list.

Understanding Mental Health Issues Among Black, Indigenous, People Of Color (BIPOC)

Even with improved access to medical care under the ACA, the disparities in health outcomes between African Americans and whites are stark. When African Americans are able to attain work, they are more likely to work in low-paying jobs that lack important benefits, including health insurance and paid leave. Black Americans, in particular, may face mental health obstacles at a higher rate than other groups, something that makes clear.
