There are signs things are changing, especially in Michoacan, where Archbishop Alberto Suárez Inda of Morelia, who was named a cardinal by Francis in 2015, urged the government in recent years to increase its presence in the violence-racked state. Modern anthropology tells us all cultures are morally equal. The conciliation policy meant that the Catholic Church regained a level of freedom of action, but one not protected by the constitution, so that their loyalty or prudence in criticism of the Díaz regime, or both, were in the Church's best interest.
