Data Protection Act 2018

The Jamaica Observer ePaper is available to you at home or at work, and is the same edition as the printed copy available at HOUSE RULES 1.

What is the Data Protection Act?

If you don't need to know people's employer, job title, former name, or work telephone number then probably best to not record that information unless people choose to add that information voluntarily, perhaps through My ChurchSuite. Obviously data informs decisions, data doesn't determine decisions, so you should use the results carefully and consider how reliable the underlying data is that's generating your smart tag results. Indeed the new GDPR has prompted us to re-assess all of ChurchSuite's systems and, where appropriate, to introduce new features to help churches in their own compliance.

A traditional privacy policy on a website may fit the bill, but the more complex the use of the data, especially in churches, the more creative and thorough you will need to be. As a starting point these are some very basic rules which, if followed, will go a long way in ensuring Managing Trustees are abiding by the Data Protection Act 2018 and the General Data Protection Regulation GDPR. In this article he explores data protection compliance and how ChurchSuite's features can help churches increase their own compliance with the new EU GDPR changes that came into force on 25th May 2018.

What is the Data Protection Act, and how does it affect my business?

Organisations cannot circumvent the previous Data Protection Act and Directive by placing specific legal obligations on organisations making them severely liable for any breaches.
