What if I have a question or need more information or clarification about the NDIS?. Abstract The passage of the NSW Young Offenders Act in 1997 attracted a great deal of interest in New South Wales and elsewhere. For more information on applying for guardianship see.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

The NDIS Act assumes that children or young people under the age of 18 are generally unable to make decisions for themselves and will be represented by the person s or agency that holds Parental Responsibility.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

For shared clients in the community that are under Parental Responsibility of the Minister, the relevant designated OOHC agency either DCJ or a NGO has primary case management responsibility. The OOHC caseworker will need to consider whether the child or young person requires the appointment of the Public Guardian with an advocacy or decision making function.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

What support should be provided for shared clients with a disability that do not have an NDIS plan? The Parental Responsibility of a shared client and their representative for NDIS purposes remains unchanged when entering custody. How will NDIS Supports be delivered to a shared client in detention? DCJ and JJ NSW are committed to working collaboratively and undertake joint case planning to maximise the safety, wellbeing and welfare of the child or young person and create the best outcomes possible. Who has Primary Case Management responsibility for shared DCJ JJ NSW Clients? This includes obtaining approval for relevant stakeholders including the OOHC caseworker to enter the detention centre environment to meet with participants and develop their NDIS plan, review their plan and deliver NDIS funded supports.

For shared clients with disability who enter detention it is the responsibility of DCJ or NGO staff with OOHC case management responsibility to undertake activities related to the NDIS access, planning, monitoring and review process. What happens when a shared client with disability is preparing to leave detention? What preparations are required for shared clients who are leaving the Parental Responsibility of the Minister? What happens when shared clients enter detention with an existing NDIS plan? Over the last few years a great deal of public and academic criticism has been levelled at traditional court process for dealing with young offenders.

Once an NDIS plan is approved or modified the OOHC caseworker will share the NDIS plan with JJ NSW and arrange for it to be attached to ChildStory. For further details about the NDIS Guidelines for OOHC casework staff please visit.

NDIS, OOHC and Juvenile Justice

Who has the authority to represent a shared client under the NDIS? JJ NSW has primary case management responsibility of a shared client in custody.
